

In the hall of the Marriott Auditorium Hotel in Madrid, a place full of style and personality, the architect decided to complete the furniture with elements of Spiga Silver metallic fabric.
On the wall behind the reception, panels have been tensioned in front of the already existing March slabs, which with grazing lighting accentuate the metallic reflections.
A ceiling / floor paneling with a double layer of mesh was then created to separate the waiting area, in order to create privacy between the two areas dedicated to customers.
